Setting Up Structure License

Unless your JIRA runs on one of the free licenses, Structure requires a license key to work. You can get a free no-obligation 30-day evaluation license key for your JIRA server in a few seconds.

Setting Up Evaluation License

- 1. Navigate to Administration | Structure | License Details.
- Look at the Current License section if there's no license there or if the license is expired, then you need to get an evaluation license or purchase a commercial license.
 - If Current License section says that you have a Free License, then your JIRA must be qualifying for automatic free license and no further action is needed from you. See When Structure is Available for Free.
- 3. To get a free 30-day unlimited-users evaluation license, follow Get Evaluation License link on the structure license page, or open evaluation license request page directly. In latter case please enter your JIRA Server ID to get a correct license.

You can also get evaluation license from Atlassian in the Plugin Manager by clicking a button named Try or Free Trial.

If you have installed a license from ALM Works, Plugin Manager may show that Structure is Unlicensed or Action Required, because it's not aware of ALM Works license. You can check true license status on Administration | Structure | License Details page — if it shows you that the license is OK, you can safely ignore the status of the license in Plugin Manager.

Licenses from ALM Works and from Atlassian

Structure support two kinds of licenses — issued by ALM Works and issued by Atlassian. These licenses are functionally equal — you can use either kind to get the same functionality in Structure. The prices are also the same.
